Amy is a wife, mother, author, blogger, photographer, herbalist, head dish washer and chicken wrangler of The Fewell Homestead. Nestled in the foothills of the Blue Ridge mountains, Amy and her family love living a natural homesteading lifestyle raising livestock, planting a kitchen garden, cooking from scratch, and living as holistically as possible.

Growing up around her grandparents farm, Amy's passion for farming growing up set her on a path to providing for her family years later. Through gardening, preserving, butchering, and home remedies, this farm girl is taking it to a whole new level of sustainability in a modern world, and herbalism is one of her main focuses on the homestead. Follow Amy online at thefewellhomestead.com

Amy is also the Founder of the organization, Homesteaders of America, an educational resource of homestead support, education, and events homesteadersofamerica.com
