Agromony Tip Sheet

As spring arrives and the weather is finally warming and the mud is starting to dry, it is time to evaluate our pastures and see where improvements can be made. One challenge many of us face is repairing damaged areas where we fed during the winter or had high animal traffic. These areas can quickly grow up in weeds if you are not careful. Reseeding these areas can help to slow weeds and give needed forage for your animals. The first step is to smooth the areas with a pasture drag or light disking if necessary. Next choose the right seed. We have several pasture mixes designed for different species of animals and different growing conditions. Seed can be broadcast as weather warms in March and lightly worked in with a pasture drag. Consider adding spring oats to give quick growth to provide cover and extra forage through the spring.
